PREFACE

Those familiar with T. G. Allen's Occurrences of Pyramid Texts (SAOC 27) know how essential that work is for the study of ancient Egyptian funerary literature. The Occurrences provides references to almost all known variants of those spells edited as Pyramid Texts, and it describes all known sources for the Pyramid Texts dating from the Old Kingdom through the Roman period. Some sources of the Pyramid Texts were published in separate editions soon after their discovery, and Sethe's edited version of all the Old Kingdom sources includes quite extensive translations and commentaries. Allen's indexes, however, provide the only reliable and accurate means of locating all variants and restoring the original position of the spells on these and all later sources. Likewise, the New Kingdom Book of the Dead has long been available to scholars both through publications of individual manuscripts and through Naville's eclectic edition which also provided a number of variants in parallel columns. Locating a particular Book of the Dead Chapter on any manuscript, however, requires consulting that papyrus or its publication (if available) or the none-too-complete references to original arrangement found in Budge's Book of the Dead.

The remaining unknown and frequently unpublished early religious texts found on Middle Kingdom coffins and similar sources were both made available and given their separate status between the Pyramid Texts and the Book of the Dead by the editors of the Egyptian Coffin Texts project. When the seventh volume in this series edited by Adriaan de Buck was published in 1961, almost all new texts found on the coffins were included and most early Book of the Dead parallels were also made available, but the spells which had been deemed very similar to those included in the edition of Pyramid Texts were systematically omitted. Unfortunately, the Pyramid Text variants on the Middle Kingdom coffins have still not been published, but it has, of course, been possible to identify almost all of these texts by consulting the actual documents, by making use of the unpublished Coffin Text sheets, or by using Allen's Occurrences. Allen himself had access to copies of the Coffin Text sheets which either contained the original editors' notes concerning parallels or allowed him to make the necessary identifications, and he included this material in his Occurrences.

By recording all the documents, lines and Coffin Text spell numbers listed in de Buck's seven volumes and by adding to these the lines and Pyramid Text spell numbers listed in Allen's Occurrences it was possible to reconstruct most of the sources used by the Coffin Text editors and also to learn something about many unused Coffin Text and Pyramid Text sources. This is precisely how I began the task, and I gratefully acknowledge the assistance of Barbara S. Lesko in sorting out these lines by hand (before we ever dreamed of using computers). I soon learned that many lines of texts on the coffins were still unaccounted for, and the next step was to consult as many documents as possible to try to discover what was missing from the undocumented lines. I knew that some lines would contain offering formulae deliberately omitted by the Coffin Text editors, and I suspected that some would contain the names and titles of the persons for whom the texts were copied and that others would be partially or totally illegible or even lost. Since I had the opportunity to check 258 documents, hundreds of photos, and thousands of pages of Coffin Text sheets, my own present listing is complete for most of the sources even with regard to illegible, unidentified, or omitted lines and also some edge inscriptions that are illegible with the coffins assembled.

I originally undertook the task of sorting out these texts as a first step in making a study of the significance of the original arrangement of all the spells on Egyptian Middle Kingdom coffins. The list has been valuable for a number of my own studies, and progress has also been made on my original project, but this is still far from completion. I know that other similar listings have been made, but none has been published. Although I would have preferred to include this Index of the Spells on Egyptian Middle Kingdom Coffins in a rather detailed study of the Coffin Text sources with discussion of their date, provenience, textual transmission, and religious/ritual significance, I

After making the commitment to bring the Index out as soon as possible, it was indeed a welcome surprise when Elizabeth B. Hauser offered me a wealth of notes, manuscripts and books belonging to the late T. G. Allen. Since the material that I received included Allen's "Sequences of Coffin Text Spells" I took the opportunity to make a final check of my own references which compared favorably. There is now the added satisfaction in being able to complete a project which Allen had apparently begun and intended to publish separately from his proposed "Supplement to the Occurrences," another useful work which was virtually complete but never published. This present volume is a small tribute to the teacher I never met—an early contributor to the Coffin Text project who continued to scrutinize that project carefully for forty years.

I am grateful to the National Endowment for the Humanities for the fellowship that enabled me to study all the documents that had to be checked in the United States, Europe, and Egypt. I am also grateful to the following institutions and individuals for their assistance in making available the source-material at their disposal: The Oriental Institute of the University of Chicago, George R. Hughes and Elizabeth B. Hauser; the University Museum in Philadelphia, Ellen Kohler and Charles Detwiler; The Yale University Art Gallery, Nan Ross and James Krenzel; The Museum of Fine Arts in Boston, William K. Simpson and Ruth Hodnick; The British Museum in London, I. E. S. Edwards and A. F. Shore; The Ashmolean Museum in Oxford, P. R. S. Moorey and Helen Murray; The Fitzwilliam Museum in Cambridge, R. V. Nicholls; Rijksmuseum van Oudheden at Leiden, Hans D. Schneider; Nederlands Instituut voor het Nabije Oosten, Tjalling Bruinsma; Museo Egizio di Torino, Silvio Curto, A. M. Donadoni Roveri; Egyptian Museum in Cairo, Gamal Mokhtar, Henri Riad and Gamal Salem; Ägyptische Museum zu Berlin, Stefan Wenig, Lothar Debbert; Ägyptische Museum (Charlottenburg), Jürgen Settgast, Peter Seibert; The Louvre; Jacques Vandier and J. L. de Cenival.

INTRODUCTION

In this Index a few documents (e.g., statues and stelae bearing texts) are listed by their museum numbers, but most documents are listed as the Coffin Text editors had designated them with two groups of letters separated by a number. The first letter or group of letters refers to the provenience of the document, the second group refers to its present location, and the consecutive numbers were assigned to distinguish the sources from a given site which also have the same present location.

The first location then is an ancient site sometimes unknown ("X" or "Y"), and the second is ordinarily the location (city) of a museum collection, but occasionally refers to the same ancient site since most tomb walls were left in situ while some wooden sources were abandoned because of their very poor condition. The texts of most abandoned pieces were copied and published, but the original documents are not usually available. Some pieces in museum collections have been lost, others thought to have been left in situ have appeared in museum collections, and at least one museum piece has been moved recently to a different museum. Of course, references long established in our literature cannot be easily changed now.

Other anomalies could have been avoided. One coffin from Abydos designated "Ab" in ECT should have been "Aby" to distinguish it from "Ab," Abusir, which was the source of several other documents in ECT. Another coffin of unknown provenience now in the Hermitage Museum is designated simply "H" in ECT whereas it would have been more correct to label it "X1Len". Using "X" to designate any unknown place was reasonable, but I have found no explanation for the editor's use of "Y" to designate the unknown provenience of some documents, and also no justification for using "Y" also for the present location "Yale", which should have been "NH" for New Haven. A few texts of uncertain provenience originally designated with an "X" have been changed in more recent literature when their provenience became known. Caution must be observed in making such changes, since it is very difficult to avoid giving the impression that a new document has been discovered.

Some documents that had been assigned numbers were later found to be uninscribed and this explains the occasional gaps below in what was referred to as consecutive numbering. When documents have had designations of the CT type assigned in later publications, these are used here, although I have refrained from referring to my own temporary numbers of unpublished documents since those who will eventually publish them will be in a much better position to label them accurately. For example, at Yale University there are portions of eleven documents rather than only the two listed in ECT, but, although all are listed as being from el Bersheh, this fact must still be confirmed, and with only seven different names occurring on them it is possible that more than one fragment may belong to the same coffin or perhaps to other of our documents with missing parts. Since there are at least seventy-eight unpublished documents with Coffin Texts it is likely that a Supplement to this Index will be forthcoming when more is known about these. It is hoped that this present Index of published or partially published texts will help those who will be publishing new documents to find parallel texts or sequences in similar documents and to identify their own texts more accurately.

In beginning their task the CT editors dismantled the sides of those coffins that were made available to them and photographed the pieces in detail. They made notes on some of the interesting features of their construction. Next they numbered the lines of texts consistently (beginning with those on the head and continuing with the foot, back, front, top, and bottom). Then they transcribed the texts in order on sheets designed to include no more than four vertical lines of text, added notes to these sheets concerning problems with transcription, and also indicated any known parallel texts. In some cases vertical lines were divided in two or three parts and these were lettered (lower case). Horizontal lines of text inside the coffins were occasionally lettered (upper case), and exterior texts and edge inscriptions (concealed in the joins of assembled coffins) were sometimes numbered, sometimes lettered, and sometimes omitted. The names and titles of owners of the documents occurred frequently within the texts, but were abbreviated by the editors to "N" already on their CT work-sheets. The editors omitted almost all offering lists and offering formulae, listed some lines as being illegible, and recorded traces for others that were practically illegible.

When the CT editors began to separate the units of text and put the parallels together from different manuscripts, these units were given "CT temp" numbers which had no relation to the spell numbers (CT) assigned them in the eventual publication (ECT). CT temp numbers 1-379 were assigned to the successive unnumbered items in Lacau, Sarcophages II, Index viii, C, and numbers 380-772 were used by de Buck for the hand copies of CT documents. A few of the texts assigned CT temp numbers were not included in ECT and likewise some parallels of published CT spells were omitted (ECT om). Some few texts and traces that were not assigned temporary numbers are cited below and elsewhere as occurring in the CT sheets even though these are not generally available.

In some cases the numbering of lines does not follow the plan of the CT editors but rather depends on the numbering system used in some prior publication. Some of the lines were assigned incorrect numbers on the CT sheets and these were sometimes but not always corrected in ECT. Occasionally line numbers are followed by "bis" when two different lines were mistakenly assigned the same number. I have tried to indicate all such difficulties below. Some lines are termed "illegible," others have "traces," and still others are labelled "uninscribed" or "no texts" to leave no doubt in the matter. Some lines are found with no text references below and this means that the text is unavailable or as yet unidentified for one reason or another but may be able to be identified eventually.

In the Index which follows the left hand column contains the line numbers for each document used. The unprefix numbers (to 1185) following the line numbers refer to CT spell numbers in ECT. The numbers prefixed by PT are Pyramid Text section numbers followed by PT Utterance numbers in parentheses. Occasionally Book of the Dead chapter numbers are given and these are prefixed by BD. An asterisk with any of these numbers means that the text is in disorder on the particular manuscript cited, or at least at variance with the published order. A number in parentheses after a spell number is used to indicate the irregular order of portions of texts that have become separated. An "a" or "b" etc. added to CT spell numbers refers to different versions of the same spell on a particular manuscript. These letters were occasionally added to the manuscript citation of subsequent texts in ECT even when these texts were not repeated. This was apparently done to keep related groups of texts connected, and I have retained these letters to make the list below correspond to ECT.

Brackets surrounding spell numbers in the right column indicate that that particular text was evidently there originally but is not usable now. Brackets around line numbers in the left column indicate that the texts cited begin in the midst of the line rather than at its beginning.

The distinctions between PT and CT are not always finely drawn. Some similarities between CT and PT are noted below, but the majority of the close parallels already cited in the ECT volumes have not been repeated here.

Since the texts of the edge inscriptions were not published and are concealed with the coffins assembled, I have included below most such texts that were legible to the CT editors. At Klaus Baer's suggestion I am also including a brief listing of Lacau's TR (Textes religieux) numbers and their corresponding CT numbers. This should provide easier access to more accurate and more complete references for the numerous TR citations in our dictionaries and grammars.
